

Udemy and Workera Partner to Build Workforce of the Future with Integrated Skills Intelligence Offering

December 11, 2025

The partnership connects skills intelligence with targeted learning to help organizations measure capabilities, close gaps, and show impact.

SAN FRANCISCO--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Dec. 11, 2025-- Udemy (Nasdaq: UDMY), a global AI-powered skills acceleration platform, today announced a new strategic partnership with Workera, a leading AI-powered skills verification platform. We believe this strategic partnership will provide organizations with a unified, data-driven way to understand workforce capabilities, identify skill gaps, and demonstrate the impact of targeted learning at scale.

The partnership brings together Workera's skills assessments, designed to show where teams stand and where gaps exist, with Udemy's expert-led courses and guided learning paths, to help employees build the skills they need. This creates an end-to-end solution that will better position us to help organizations understand strengths, deliver relevant training, and monitor improvement over time.

"Our customers need clarity on what skills their teams have today and what they must build for tomorrow," said Hugo Sarrazin, President and CEO at Udemy. "By partnering with Workera, we're uniting rigorous assessment with Udemy's trusted global learning platform to create a powerful, data-driven solution that helps organizations build more resilient, innovative, future-ready teams."

As AI reshapes jobs and expectations, the pressure to upskill has never been higher. Udemy's 2026 Global Learning & Skills Trends Report—based on insights from more than 17,000 enterprise customers—shows surging demand for practical GenAI skills, alongside sustained investment in leadership and human skills. Organizations need more than one-off training; they need a continuous, measurable way to build the skills that matter most.

"Workera's mission is to help organizations deeply understand their workforce capabilities through precise, role-aligned assessment and validation," said Kian Katanforoosh, Founder and CEO at Workera. "Partnering with Udemy means those insights are instantly connected to one of the world's most robust learning ecosystems. Together, we enable companies to identify and bridge skills gaps, to deliver real, measurable progress."
